About us

The Mexican Council on Foreign Relations, COMEXI, is a nonprofit independent organization, dedicated to the analysis, study, and debate of the major global trends and their impact on Mexico. We seek to inform society with insightful up-to-date information, impact opinion leaders and influence public policy.

We organize discussion panels, roundtable meetings, high-level conversations and international fora as well as working groups on the most pressing topics of the global agenda. Through public discussions and publications, we seek to promote a non-partisan vision of the country's international agenda.

COMEXI's memberships consist of more than 500 associates, including recognized experts in various fields, global corporations based in Mexico, Mexican companies with an international reach, embassies, international organizations, academics, and research centers.

Our members can participate and contribute their knowledge to the Working Groups, as well as in our public events, conferences, webinars and other activities we organize specifically for them. In order to motivate public debates on the issues and priorities that interest Mexican society most, COMEXI seeks to engage, on a regular basis, with government, civil organizations, the private sector, and other relevant stakeholders.
